An introduction to IBS and indigestion

If you suffer from IBS you will be at greater risk of experiencing indigestion and other symptoms associated with the condition, such as acid reflux. Periodic bouts of indigestion, especially after a few over-indulging meals, is normal. However, when symptoms start occurring on a more frequent basis, we should be looking for a cause. One cause of indigestion to consider is IBS.

Why does IBS cause indigestion?

Indigestion basically means 'bad digestion' and symptoms arise from the upper end of the digestive tract. The link between IBS and indigestion is still not clear. Both symptoms share a number of symptoms including flatulence, bloating and pain or discomfort. But the common cause in both conditions for these symptoms is still not clearly understood. A deficiency or malfunction of digestive enzymes may have a role. Decreased stomach acid (known as hypochlorhydria) is a commonly misdiagnosed condition. As people age, production of stomach acid naturally

Why Does My Heart Rate Spike When I'm Asleep?

Your body undergoes a number of important recuperative processes during sleep, from cell renewal to muscle repair to restorative brain activity. Changes in breathing, oxygen levels, and heart rate occur as well. These actions are essential to your long-term health. While having a slight fluctuation in heart rate during sleep is normal, it is important to understand the causes of more noticeable spikes in your heart's number of beats per minute. Sleep apnea and heart rate fluctuation A common cause of a rising heart rate during sleep is a lack of oxygen, which is often brought on by obstructive sleep apnea. This is a condition where a person's normal breathing frequency is reduced or sometimes flat-out stopped during sleep. The effort to breathe persists, but with the upper airway blocked, oxygen levels drop and carbon dioxide levels rise. These blockages involve the softening of the muscles around the throat, soft palate, uvula, and tongue base. When the occurrence of these interruptions—referred to as apneas

Herbal medicines

Herbal medicines are those with active ingredients made from plant parts, such as leaves, roots or flowers. But being doesn't necessarily mean they're safe for you to take. Just like conventional medicines, herbal medicines will have an effect on the body, and can be potentially harmful if not used correctly. They should therefore be used with the same care and respect as conventional medicines. If you're consulting your doctor or pharmacist about health matters, or are about to undergo surgery, always tell them about any herbal medicines you're taking.

Potential issues with herbal

If you're taking, or plan to take, any herbal medicines, be aware of the following: They may cause problems if you're taking other medicines. They could result in reduced or enhanced effects of the medicine, including potential side effects. You may experience a bad reaction or side effects after taking a herbal medicine. Not all herbal medicines are regulated. Remedies specially prepared for individuals don't need a licence, and
